Council Battle Against Backdoor Amnesty Expands

The U.S. Border Security Council is working overtime against President Obama's "backdoor amnesty."

"The American people are outraged that this man has unilaterally decided to stop enforcing the laws and is allowing a large number of illegal aliens to remain in this country," says Steve LeBlanc, the U.S. Border Security Council's National Spokesman. "We will never give up fighting this illegal executive order."

The Council has been leading the fight against amnesty for the past several years and just recently delivered thousands more anti-amnesty petitions to Congress. LeBlanc believes that Obama's recent decree ordering immigration officials to stop enforcing the laws against may illegals is a direct result of the Council's success.

"Our firewall in the U.S. House of Representatives is holding up.

President Barack Obama has effectively granted amnesty to millions of illegal immigrants. His edict is unconstitutional and will destroy America.

Neither Perry nor Romney Thrill Border Security Advocates

The policies of the two front-runners for the Republican nomination for President leave a great deal to be desired, concludes the U.S. Border Security Council. "Neither Rick Perry nor Mitt Romney has a sterling record on standing up to the illegal alien invasion," says Council National Spokesman Steve LeBlanc. "So far, neither man has been willing to do what it takes to protect Americans from the illegal alien invasion."

Perry, as Governor of Texas, has argued forcefully for the militarization of the southern border. He ordered the installation of video cameras along smuggling routes and has deployed teams of heavily armed law enforcement officers to hunt down drug smugglers.

However, Perry supported allowing illegal aliens to attend state universities and pay in-state tuition. He has also been a vocal critic of

Border Security News in Brief

California Bill to Benefit Illegal Alien Drivers

Legislation introduced by California Assemblyman Gil Cedillo, would change police procedures at drunken-driving checkpoints, prohibiting officers from arresting drivers and immediately impounding their cars if their only offense is not having a license. The measure would keep DUI checkpoints from being used to identify illegal immigrants who cannot obtain licenses.

Illegal Alien Gets Scammed Out of Lottery Winnings

An illegal immigrant was cheated out of $3 million he won in a state lottery by a man who ran the New York store where the ticket was purchased. The store manager apparently lied and told the winner that illegal aliens can't claim lottery prizes and any attempt to claim the prize would result in his deportation. The alien then agreed to sign the ticket over to the store owner.

Illegal Get Billions in Tax Credits

The Internal Revenue Service recently reported that it allowed illegal aliens to collect $4.2 billion in refundable tax credits in 2010. That amount is almost quadruple what the agency says illegal received from the same tax credits five years ago. Illegals are not supposed to receive federal benefits, however the law is "ambiguous" on whether illegals qualify for a tax break based on earned income called the additional child tax credit the report says.

SNEAK OF THE MONTH: White House Official Cecilia Munoz

Cecilia Munoz, the White House director of intergovernmental affairs, is this month's Sneak of the Month. Munoz compared illegally residing in the United States to jaywalking.

"If you were running the police department of any urban area in this country, you would spend more resources going after serious criminals than after jaywalkers. DHS (the Department of Homeland Security) is doing the immigration equivalent of the same thing," Munoz told the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI) conference recently.

Munoz was apparently tasked with explaining the Administration's new "Backdoor Amnesty" policy under which law enforcement officials are no longer supposed to deport illegals unless they have committed a "serious" crime.

Amnesty is going nowhere there and the President knows it,” LeBlanc explains. “That’s probably why he is acting like a dictator and granting amnesty through an executive order.”

Pro-illegal immigrant groups have been lobbying the President to ignore Congress and impose amnesty himself for some time. Despite some initial claims from the Administration that it would be illegal for it to act without Congress passing an amnesty law, Obama has obviously decided that the legal ramifications of this action pale in comparison to the political benefit he stands to reap with the illegal alien community.

Obama order instructs homeland security officials to suspend enforcing immigration laws against illegal aliens who are enrolled in college, who have family members serving in the military or if the illegal is nursing or pregnant. Specifically, officials are ordered to use “prosecutorial discretion” when deciding what do with illegal immigrants.

The Council has been leading the fight against amnesty for the past several years and just recently delivered thousands more anti-amnesty petitions to Congress.

“President Obama just effectively ordered federal law enforcement officials to stop enforcing the laws, and that is amnesty,” complains LeBlanc.

“The Council’s strategy going forward is to force Congress to hold public hearings and threaten to defund parts of the federal government if the President doesn’t change course,” LeBlanc says. “We have to make sticking with this backdoor amnesty decision more politically costly than it is worth. It’s fairly obvious that Barack Obama cares more about getting reelected than in protecting American. Our goal is to use that to our advantage. The American people are outraged at this.”

LeBlanc says the Council will continue to inundate both Congress and the White House with anti-amnesty petitions. More petition campaigns targeted at key members of the House and Senate will be mailed out throughout the winter.

“We cannot lighten up for one minute,” LeBlanc warns. “Obama and his illegal alien friends are working overtime. So we must be even more dedicated than ever.”

the border fences. “Building a wall along the entire Texas-Mexico border would not only be cost prohibitive – in the range of billions of dollars – it would create a false sense of security. And unless the federal government is willing to put enforcement personnel all along such a barrier – something it has refused to do for decades along a border without fencing – it will be no more successful at keeping illegal immigrants out of Texas than the Rio Grande River,” Perry once declared.

Romney, who recently has been attacking Perry’s immigration record, has his own faults. As governor of Massachusetts, he did nothing to crack down on sanctuary cities in his state and only allowed local law enforcement officers to cooperate with federal immigration officials at the very end of his term in office, when he was gearing up for his first run for the Presidency.

Romney also on at least two occasions employed illegal aliens to work on his private estate.

“Neither of these men are very good on border security issues,” says LeBlanc. “They both say they are against Amnesty and I suppose I believe them. However, this is a crisis. We need real leaders to step up and put an end to this invasion. Mealy-mouthed politicians aren’t going to do that.”

Mitt Romney will not likely be a hard-core champion of border security if he is elected President.

Dear Friend,

Sometimes we are victims of our own success.

It appears that we have been so successful in blocking amnesty from being passed by Congress, that President Obama has decided to do an end run around the Constitution and impose amnesty by executive order.

Here at the U.S. Border Security Council we are having none of this nonsense. We are going to fight this order just as hard as we fought the various amnesty bills that were proposed on Capitol Hill.

Probably, even harder!

Please remain involved with the Council's grassroots campaigns. We are making a difference. But total victory, and a secure border, are still a long way off.

LeBlanc Demands Investigation of Obama's "Uncle Omar"

U.S. Border Security Council National Spokesman Steve LeBlanc, is demanding a federal investigation be launched in to President Barack Obama's uncle, Onyango Obama, who is an illegal alien who has been residing in this country since 1963.

"Uncle Omar" as he is often called, came to the United States to study as an American Prep School. He soon dropped out of school and took up permanent residence in the United states as an illegal alien. He was ordered deported in 1989 but, apparently simply ignored the order. Last summer "Uncle Omar" was arrested for drunk driving and crashing his vehicle into a police car. While in detention Omar threatened to call the White House.

Omar was later released by law enforcement authorities instead of being deported as the law demands. "This whole thing stinks and it needs to be investigated," LeBlanc says.

Onyango Obama, Barack Obama's "Uncle Omar," was recently arrested for drunk driving. He has been living in this country illegally for nearly two decades.
