Council Spokesman Ignites National Debate on Southern Border and ISIS Terrorists

National Spokesman Steven J. LeBlanc asking the question that sparked a national debate on ISIS and our southern border's vulnerability.

U.S. Border Security Council National Spokesman Steven J. LeBlanc kicked off a nationwide debate on the vulnerability of our southern border and whether or not members of the vicious, barbaric terrorist group, the Islamic State in Iraq and Syria, or ISIS, are infiltrating America.

While attending an event at the Heritage Foundation on Capitol Hill, U.S. Border Security Council National Spokesman Steven J. LeBlanc asked one of only two questions taken by Texas Governor Rick Perry: "Is there a concern that members of ISIS

September on Capitol Hill came to a close with a flurry of hearings examining the President's plan of action to combat the growing threat of terrorism in the Middle East. Two separate hearings were held on September 18th in the Rayburn House Office Building. Secretary of Defense Chuck Hagel, as well as Secretary of State John Kerry, both testified in front of Congress on the administration's plan to deal with ISIS.

"There was a lot of skepticism among Congressmen from both sides of the aisle,"

I Want To Hear From You

Dear Patriotic Friend,

I Need Your Help!

The 113th Congress has been a long and tenuous battle. The U.S. Border Security Council and our members have stood strong against any and all attempts by the President and his Democrat-controlled Senate to grant amnesty to more than 12 million illegal aliens currently residing in America.

With your help, the U.S. Border Security Council was able to forge powerful allies in the House and Senate during the 113th Congress to help fight against amnesty, as well as to strengthen our southern border. With the current state of affairs in the Middle East, our southern border is now being put under additional strain and will remain a key element in protecting American citizens from another terrorist attack on American soil.

That is why I am calling on you, dear member, to stay especially vigilant in your support of the U.S. Border Security Council during the upcoming lame-duck session of Congress, as well as throughout the new, incoming 114th Congress. President Obama has promised executive action on immigration as soon as the November elections have concluded. I need all U.S. Border Security Council members to continue to participate in our petition drives and surveys, as well as contacting your elected officials demanding they stand firm against any form of Amnesty for the 12 million illegal aliens currently in America.

Thank you for all your support during the 113th Congress, and I look forward to working with you during the 114th.

Keep fighting for America,

Steven J. LeBlanc

SNEAK OF THE MONTH: President Barack Hussein Obama

On Thursday, October 3, President Barack Hussein Obama spoke at the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute's annual gala trying to clean up the mess he created earlier in the summer, promising executive action on immigration reform before the November elections.

In yet another attempt by the Obama administration to side-step current immigration laws in America, the President stated, "It's not a matter of if, but when," regarding his promise to use executive action to protect the more than 12 million illegal aliens currently might be using our southern border to get into the United States?” Governor Perry conceded that, “There’s the obvious great concern that, because of the condition of the border from the standpoint of it not being secure and us not knowing who is penetrating across, that individuals from ISIS and other terrorist states could be — and I think there’s a very real possibility that they may have already used that,” Perry stated.

Only hours later, Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel called a press conference of his own to warn citizens of the growing threat ISIS brings to America, stating ISIS is “beyond anything that we’ve seen.”

“Our members have been unrelenting when it comes to securing our southern border before anything else can be done on immigration,” states LeBlanc, “and Governor Perry agreed wholeheartedly.”

residing in America. The President continued by saying, “The moment I act—and it will be taking place between the November elections and the end of the year—opponents will roll out the same old scare tactics. When opponents are out there saying who knows what, I’m going to need you to have my back.”

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell countered that statement by saying, “The President’s promise isn’t about making the best policy or enforcing the law—it’s an admission that his pledge not to uphold the law in the future would be bad for his party now.”

For his efforts to re-write the current laws of the land in order to grant amnesty to more than 12 million lawbreaking illegal aliens, President Barack Hussein Obama is the U.S. Border Security Council’s Sneak of the Month.

stated U.S. Border Security Council National Spokesman Steve LeBlanc. “Many Members of Congress wondered the same thing as our membership, what about our southern border? Is American soil safe from another terrorist attack?”

After the hearing with Defense Secretary Hagel, Project Director Sean Ferritor stopped by the office of Congressman Walter Jones, member of the Armed Services Committee, to discuss the Hagel hearing and what comes next for America. “Congressman Jones is very pro-military but was concerned with losing even a single American soldier by putting boots on the ground,” states Ferritor. “There’s no question that Congressman Jones agreed with our supporters though, that our southern border must be secured as soon as possible.”
